

Thursday Thoughts - Bracketology and Investing: Fundamentals (4-3-2025)

As "March Madness" winds down and the NCAA Men's Final Four is set, there's a great lesson tucked into all the excitement. The four teams that made it came in as No. 1 seeds. Their journey to the semifinals is a solid reminder: Success is usually built on strong fundamentals and consistent performance.

Sure, the brackets were full of wild predictions and Cinderella stories, but when the dust settled, it was the teams with the best stats, steady performance, and the strongest track records that moved on.

It's a fitting parallel to investing. In a world full of headlines, hot tips, and speculation, it's tempting to chase the next big thing. But time and time again, reliable outcomes are generally a result of a disciplined approach—rooted in research, quantitative analysis, and objective fundamentals.

That's the same approach I take in managing your portfolio. My decisions are based on thoughtful research and a commitment to comprehensive wealth management strategies. It may not always be flashy or make the news, but it's designed to help you reach your financial goals—no matter what the markets throw our way.

Enjoy the excitement of the Final Four! And as always, if you'd like to talk through your financial strategy or have any questions, feel free to reach out.

Have a great rest of the week, and enjoy the games.
